1. In the meeting 25 May of the Constitutional Committee of the Volksrat, it was agreed that there should be no reference in the constitution to the capitulation or the occupation of Germany. Grotewohl pointed out that the Allies proclaimed the purpose of the occupation to be the democratization and demilitarization of the German people; according to Grotewohl, these objectives have been attained in the Russian Zone. It was implied that upon proclamation of the new constitution, Russian troops will be withdrawn from Germany. Grotewohl urged that a "National Resistance" against the Western Powers be proclaimed after this Russian step.

2. [redacted] the bourgeois members of the Volksrat would welcome the withdrawal of Russian troops even at the expense of final acceptance of the Oder-Neisse boundary.
